Lou Sheppard will talk about their recent work creating graphic scores as a means of witnessing, reflecting and responding to our rapidly changing environment.

Lou Sheppard is an interdisciplinary artist from K'ijipuktuk/Halifax. They have exhibited in Canada and internationally, notably in the Toronto Biennial, in the Antarctic Biennale and the Antarctic Pavilion in Venice. Sheppard received the Emerging Atlantic Artist Award in 2017, and has twice been longlisted for the Sobey Art Award (2018, 2020) receiving an international residency award in 2018. In their current practice Sheppard uses processes of translation and metaphor to interrogate structures of power and performativity in data and language. Their work often leads them to collaborate with communities and with musicians, visual artists and performing artists. They are the current Branscombe House artist in residence with the city of Richmond, BC.
